ANNUAL CONVENTION

Of the American Federation of Labor Meets.

Delegates Assemble in Historic Independence Hall, a Place Hallowed by Sacred Memories.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.]

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—In Independence Hall to-day the twelfth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor begins, and in many respects it will be the most important labor gathering ever held in the United States. This is due of course to the fact that it is the first national meeting of trades union organizations since the close of the great strikes of 1892. President Samuel Gompers, who will preside over all the deliberations, has this to say of the prospective work of the organization:

"We will have with us delegations from all the organizations in which strikes occurred and will be furnished with complete reports concerning them. Capt. John O'Brien, the organizer from Oregon, will be one of the notable characters at the gathering. He comes armed with the facts in the Coeur d'Alene strikes, and his report will astonish the country. As far as I can learn it will show that the Federal troops shot down men who were acting in the defensive all the time. But aside from this strike we will have reports from Buffalo, Tennessee and Homestead, and all these cases will be thoroughly discussed. Pinkertonism will receive a rebuke which it will remember for years, and Congress will of course be memorialized to act decisively against further treacherous action on the part of detective agencies or employees. Then there are a number of important questions to come up in addition to these mentioned. Homestead day will of course be observed on December 13, to-morrow, and collections will be taken up for the destitute at Homestead, not alone in the convention, but in every trades union in the country. Efforts will also be directed to strengthening all existing organizations who are affiliated with the Federation, and we have hopes that the great organizations of labor employees will come into the fold this year. As we believe in the restriction of immigration to some extent, that question will claim our attention very soon after we meet. The reduction of the hours of labor to eight will of course be advocated again, but just what steps the convention will take in the way of forcing demands of this kind remains for the delegates to see. A decided change in the conspiracy laws will be thoroughly discussed, and brought to the attention of Legislators in no equivocal terms. The prohibition of child labor, the convict contract system and the question of the liability of employers for accidents to workmen occasioned by defective machinery will all receive the attention at the convention."

The representation in the convention is arranged on the following basis: International and national unions, with less than 4,000 members one delegate; for 4,000 members or more, two delegates; for 8,000 members or more, three delegates; for 16,000 members or more, four delegates; for 32,000 members or more, five delegates; and so on. Local trade, or federal labor unions, State federations, central labor unions, trades assemblies or trades councils, one delegate each.

The headquarters are at the Girard House and there the executive committee will hold its council meetings. The officers, all of whom will probably be re-elected, are Samuel Gompers, president; P. J. McGuire, first vice-president; William A. Carney, second vice-president; Chris Evans, secretary; John B. Lannon, treasurer.

The guests will be royally entertained during their stay in Philadelphia and a reception committee, of which H. L. Mines is secretary, will escort the visitors to points of interest in Philadelphia and will arrange a banquet for them at the close of the convention. It will indeed be a historic gathering in a place hallowed by sacred memories.

MRS. E. A. EDDINGS

Died at Her Home Near Fulton, Ky., After a Brief Illness.

To the Tobacco Leaf-Chronicle.]

Died, near Fulton, Ky., Dec. 11, 1892, Mrs. E. A. Eddings, in the 76th year of her age. She was the sister of Wm. G. Geo. S. and R. H. Pickering, the only three surviving children out of a numerous family. Capt. and Mrs. Eddings were life members of the Christian church. They took part in the organization of the church at this place many years ago. Sister Eddings lingered a few years after the death of her husband and has now gone to join him in the christian's home. The beautiful christian lives of Capt. and Sister Eddings will be remembered by many of the older citizens of this city and community, who will mingle their love and sympathy with the bereaved and the stricken.

NEWS IN TWO STATES.

Tennessee and Kentucky Happenings Briefly Chronicled.

Some News Notes That Will Prove Interesting to Readers of the Leaf-Chronicle.

Chas. Hayes, a noted Texas criminal, wanted for several crimes in that State, was shot and killed in Hawkins county one day last week while resisting arrest. The news of the killing was received at Nashville while requisition papers for him were being issued.

The committee appointed by the Bar Association of the State at its last meeting, for the purpose of drafting a bill to be presented to the next Legislature, for the purpose of creating a court of Chancery appeals, met in Nashville Saturday to draw up the document. This action was taken in view of the fact that the Supreme court has each year more cases on its docket than it can attend to.

Since the recent disastrous fire at Milan, in which the entire town narrowly escaped, the Exchange is advocating water works for the city.

The Trenton (Tenn.) Democrat says: "Prof. G. R. McGee recently set out 400 pecan trees on his farm near Trenton. The plants cover ten acres of ground and Mr. McGee calculates that in ten years they will begin to yield profitably and that his investment will some day yield a handsome income to the person who owns it."

At a largely attended meeting of the Democrats of Obion county last week strong resolutions were adopted urging Hon. Frank P. Bond, of Brownsville, for Internal Revenue collector for this district. The people down there are so strong for him that the ladies are getting up a petition for him. This document is being signed by all the leading ladies of that county. This leads the States-Democrat to remark that if the wishes of the ladies of West Tennessee are regarded Mr. Bond will get the appointment.

The people of the Woods Valley vicinity, according to the Dickson county papers, are building a new Methodist church at that place. This church belongs to the Southside circuit, a new work created at the last session of the Tennessee conference.

Last Thursday evening, at the residence of the bride in this city, Mr. Jno. Sullivan was married to Mrs. Nannie E. Wahl. The groom is over 70 years of age, while the bride is fair and forty.—Milan Exchange.

Another suit has been brought against the Owensboro & Nashville railroad on account of the wreck at South Carrollton last June, in which several people lost their lives. This wreck, it will be remembered, was caused by a collision of a regular passenger train and a colored excursion train. Hugh Barclay, of Russellville, was fireman of the excursion engine and was killed. The Deposit Bank of Russellville has qualified as administrator of Barclay and has filed suit in the Logan Circuit court against the O. & N. railroad for $25,000 damages for negligently causing, through the carelessness of its employees, agents and servants, the death of the plaintiff's decedent.

The board of trustees of the State University held their annual meeting at Knoxville last week and decided to petition the Legislature for an appropriation of $50,000 for building purposes.

S. J. Harper, of Dyersburg, killed three hundred ducks the other day in six hours. He stood at one place and did the killing. He fired six hundred shots, and now his arm is paralyzed by the gun kicking him. The Tipton Headlight is authority for this.

Says the Henderson (Ky.) Gleaner: "Bryant Lipscomb, who was confined in the Daviess county jail last June for an offense against the laws of the United States, has brought suit against N. M. Lancaster, jailer, for $20,000, because the latter put one Dan Rudy, a negro arrested for larceny, in the same cell with him without first depriving him of his penknife, with which he seriously cut the plaintiff across the face and on the arm."

The following tobacco news is taken from Saturday's issue of the New Era: "Several more large stemmeries and rehandling establishments will be in operation in Hopkinsville during the coming season. Messrs. Nelson & Dabney are having erected on Campbell street, in the rear of their warehouse, a large brick building, which will be fitted and provided with every modern improvement for the rapid preparation of the weed for market. Messrs. E. M. Flack and W. M. West have formed a partnership and secured the large brick building at Railroad and Tenth streets, which will be improved extensively and equipped thoroughly for the large business which their popularity and experience will command. Mr. J. D. Ware, Mr. W. R. Lowry and other well known tobacco men will also conduct large stemmeries, thus making the rehandling of tobacco one of the chief industries of the city, and affording steady employment during the season to several hundred laborers. Large quantities of the new crop have already been purchased loose and scores of wagons are delivering the great Kentucky staple at our doors every day."

HON. HARVEY MYERS

Acquitted on a Charge of Bribery at Covington.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.

COVINGTON, KY., Dec. 11.—Hon.

Harvey Myers was arraigned here this morning in the Criminal court on a charge of bribery. Both sides announced themselves ready for a trial and a jury was empaneled. The jury, on a technicality, was ordered to bring in a verdict for the defendant, which was promptly done.

Unfortunate Greatness.

The more eminent the man the less his personal freedom. There is, to my mind, something not altogether satisfactory in the contemplation of that plain truth. It is as though we set up a god and placed him on a lofty pinnacle, and set him apart and kept him there. How much better off are we little ones in the green pastures far beneath!

Think, for instance, of the things which we can do, and which, say, Mr. Gladstone or the Marquis of Salisbury cannot. We may take a hand at penny naps every night of our lives, or even shilling naps, if we have shillings in our purses, and who shall say us nay? We should very properly regard that person as an interfering ass who in our hearing criticised our pursuits. If he were so foolish as to attempt to prevent our playing naps, there would, not possibly, be a case of assault and battery and a verdict of served him right. But let Mr. Gladstone or the Marquis of Salisbury play a nightly game of naps, and let us face of their doing so be known, and it is quite on the cards that hundreds of thousands of hands will be stretched out to hurl them where a recently deceased Irishman was hurled.

We can be guilty of a hundred peccadilloes, and we are guilty of them every day. We are in a chronic state of guilt. I am bound to own I am. But no one thinks a penny the worse of us. But let Mr. Gladstone be found out in one—and what a hubbub would be raised! We little ones know that this is a world of give and take; that we are but human; that it is human to err. But in the case of a great man we decline to allow that he is human. His is a case in which the one rift in the lute makes all the music mute. Let him fall away in one thing, he falls away in all things.—All the Year Round.

An Inconvenient Advertisement.

He was a very young man and was got up in the highest style of art. He sat down in the train car and regarded with evident admiration a pair of very positive, very loudly checked and very new trousers, which he pulled up carefully at the knees to prevent any tendency to bagging.

The car rattled and clattered along, and all the passengers gazed into upward vacancy, like all train car passengers do. Finally a fair maiden, who sat opposite the young man, saw something and giggled, after the fashion of her kind. Then she looked at the nice young man and giggled again, and then she nudged her fair companion, and the fair companion gazed across the car, looked at the young man and giggled.

All this annoyed the nice young man, who had been looking very wise, and when two or three other passengers joined in the chorus he began to wriggle and ceased looking wise. The laughing increased and grew and spread, and the nice young man grew desperate. He got up to see what it was over his head that caused the unmeaning cackling.

He found it. It was one of those big cardboard advertisements that adorn train cars. It was printed in big black letters, and it said:

The young man sitting beneath this card is one of our customers. He is very fussy and hard to please; but my isn't he an elegant dresser? He has on a pair of our 10s. 6d. trousers.—London Tit-Bits.

What the Eskimos Eat.

The trip of the group of Eskimos recently landed in Boston on the way to the World's fair was uneventful, except for the difficulty experienced in providing satisfactory food for the Eskimos. They would not eat cod fish, and they would not eat seal meat, and they would not eat walrus meat, and they would not eat any of the other things which they ate raw. During the remainder of the voyage the passengers spent a portion of each day in fishing, this being their only pleasure.

The Evelina arrived at Port Hawkesburg on Oct. 3 and put in there for provisions. A barrel of cabbage was bought and opened on the deck. Within fifteen minutes every bit of the contents of that barrel had disappeared, the passengers having eaten all parts of the vegetable. Some apples were offered to them. They tasted the fruit, but it was not to their liking, and they have not since accepted any. Raw potatoes and raw turnips are eaten with a relish.—New York Tribune.

An After Election Conversation.

Two boys were overheard Wednesday as follows: "I'm glad 'lection is over. I got forty-two barrels—the most of our crowd—but Joe Smith bossed us all just 'cause he stored the barrels in his cellar." "Same with us," replied the other. "We had eighty-nine barrels, fourteen peach baskets, two butter tubs, and then Will Blake bossed the fire cause he brought two old mattresses, his cellar covers and three blinds. But, say, those mattresses made a dandy blaze, and he furnished tar, too, so 'raps he did have the most." "Which would seem to indicate that the rights of bossism are early conceded, and that the retrospect of election is not confined to the elders."—New York Times.
